Additional Notes

•The French Literature concentration is ideal for students who are native speakers, or who already have an advanced level of French proficiency, and therefore require minimum language study.

•FREN 311, 312, 321: 3 credits must be taken from this category. No exceptions and no substitutions. This course may be taken simultaneously with FREN 341 or 342.

•FREN 341 and FREN 342: 6 credits must be taken from this category. Ideally, a student will have completed FREN 342 before taking any 300-level course dealing with literature from the eighteenth, nineteenth, twentieth, or twenty-first centuries. Similarly, a student should have taken FREN 341 before taking any 300-level course focusing on literature from the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, or the Grand Siècle.

•FREN 335-365: 21 credits must be taken from this category.

* Study Abroad:

a.) Compiègne: this immersion program is ideal for students who have finished one year of language study. Its successful completion will earn 6 credits toward FREN 201 and 202. It should be completed during the summer between the first and second year;

b.) Paris-CUNY Exchange Program: students are encouraged to study at least one semester in Paris. Ideally, a student should have approximately one year of upper division French courses under his or her belt before departure.

Nota Bene: at least 15 credits of the major must be taken “in-residency,” that is, at Hunter College. For courses taken abroad to be counted as equivalent, they must fit with the course offerings in the French major.
